

INCENTIVE/REWARD FOR MAKING SOTL WORK PUBLIC BEYOND ISU

At Illinois State University, the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning (SoTL) is defined as “the systematic study/reflection on teaching and learning [of our ISU students] made public.”

The Cross Chair in the Scholarship of Teaching and Learning is offering $200 ‘incentives/rewards’--while funds last-- to ISU faculty and staff who submit a product representing their ISU SoTL work (as defined above) to a book, journal, newsletter, conference, website, blog, juried show, or similar external and peer reviewed/judged outlet. Only one $200 incentive will be awarded per submission.

To earn this incentive/reward, the following requirements must be met and clearly documented:

1. The product (e.g., paper, presentation, video creative product...) must clearly be a representation or summary of a SoTL project as defined above.
2. The product must be submitted between January 1 and April 25, 2016.
3. The outlet to which the product is submitted must be external to ISU and involve peer or editorial review, judging, or a similar form of scholarly review.

To apply, send the following by April 25 (funding is limited so applications are best done as soon as submission has occurred) to sotl@ilstu.edu as a pdf file(s) and/or in body of email:

1. A clear summary of the SoTL project (research question/focus, context, who was ‘studied’, method or type/source of ‘data’, main results...). (1 pg. max.)
2. An official acknowledgment (e.g., letter, email) from the author, editor, blog editor, conference organizer, etc. of the outlet that clearly indicates what you submitted and when.
3. Official documentation (letter from editor, copy of information from a web page, etc.) that shows the outlet has some form of scholarly review.
